The Stellenbosch University Law Clinic (“SULC”)

is proud to announce the

SULC Legal Ethics / Ethics in Law Conference

Theme: COVID-19: Ethics under pressure

Date: 29 & 30 November 2021

We live in an increasingly chaotic world. We are well into our second year of a global pandemic. Impoverished and developing nations have, as a result of the vaccine grab, been left scrambling to vaccinate their citizens. Opportunistic state authoritarianism disguised as public health protection stifles the media and restricts human rights. All this while we are still under the looming storms of climate change and the refugee crises. Undoubtedly, ethics in law has taken the back seat for the time being. How will this impact on us and on future generations?

This conference, organised by the SULC and supported by the International Association of Legal Ethics (“IAOLE”), aims to provide a platform for international academics, legal professionals, and interested thinkers to voice their opinions and concerns. The conference will be conducted virtually, with all the sessions being held online using Microsoft Teams. The session links and conference programme will be made available in due course.
